

Welcome to the Norfolk Broads

The Broads have been a favourite boating holiday destination since the early 20th century. The waterways are lock-free, although there are three bridges under which only small cruisers can pass. The area attracts all kinds of visitors, including ramblers, artists, anglers, and bird-watchers as well as people "messaging about in boats". The Norfolk wherry, the traditional cargo craft of the area, can still be seen on the Broads as some specimens have been preserved and restored.

Congratulations,
you have reached
The Norfolk Broads.

Welcome to The Angel of the North

As the name suggests, it is a steel sculpture of an angel, standing 20 metres (66 feet) tall, with wings 54 metres (178 feet) wide – making it wider than the Statue of Liberty's height. The wings themselves are not planar, but are angled 3.5 degrees forward, which Gormley has been quoted as saying was to create "a sense of embrace". It stands on a hill overlooking the A1 road and the A167 road into Tyneside and the East Coast Main Line rail route.

Congratulations,
you have reached
The Angel of the North, Tyne and Wear.

Welcome to Eilean Donan Castle

Eilean Donan (Scottish Gaelic for Island of Donan), is a small island in Loch Duich in the western Highlands of Scotland. Eilean Donan castle is the famous castle situated on the island. The castle was restored in the years between 1912 and 1932, the restoration included the construction of an arched bridge to give easier access to the castle. It is now one of the most photographed monuments in Scotland and a popular venue for weddings and film locations, it has appeared in such films as Highlander. On a clear day it is possible to see the Isle of Skye from the castle.

Congratulations,
you have reached
Eilean Donan Castle,
Highlands, Scotland.

Welcome to the Giant's Causeway

Legend has it that the Irish giant Fionn mac Cumhail (Finn McCool) built the causeway to walk to Scotland to fight his Scottish counterpart Benandonner. One version of the legend tells that Finn McCool fell asleep before he got to Scotland. When he did not arrive, the much larger Benandonner crossed the bridge looking for him. To protect Fionn, his wife Oonagh laid a blanket over Fionn and pretended he was actually Fionn's baby son.

Congratulations,
you have reached
The Giant's Causeway,
County Antrim,
Northern Ireland.

Welcome to Blackpool

Blackpool is believed to get its name from a long gone drainage channel which ran over a peat bog. The water which ran into the sea at Blackpool was black from the peat and formed a "black pool" in waters of the Irish Sea. Blackpool rose to prominence as a major centre of tourism during the 19th century, particularly for the inhabitants of northern mill towns. Blackpool Tower, opened in 1894 and has been a dominant landmark of the Blackpool skyline for well over a century. Inspired by the Eiffel Tower of Paris, France. It is 158 m (518 ft 9 in) tall.

Congratulations,
you have reached
Blackpool, Lancashire.

Welcome to Durdle Door

Durdle Door is one of Dorset's most recognisable features. Originally a band of resistant Portland limestone ran along the shore, the same band which can be seen two miles down the coast forming the narrow entrance to Lulworth Cove. Behind this is a 400 ft (120 metre) band of various weaker rocks which are easily eroded, and behind this is a stronger and much thicker band of chalk, which forms the Purbeck Hills. On a clear day you can see along the Jurassic Coast westwards towards Portland and eastwards towards Man of War Bay and Lulworth.

Congratulations,
you have reached
Durdle Door, Dorset.